We work on challenging social-sector problems to improve people's lives. We focus our efforts on where we can make the greatest impact to lead and shine a light on policy issues that affect the wellbeing of New Zealanders. We collaborate across the system advising on policy issues that fall between the gaps. Ultimately, we want our approaches to achieve sustainable improvements for the wellbeing of New Zealanders.

Our people are our centre. They're curious, agile and hardworking, and instinctively care about the wellbeing of others. Our values are important to us - they guide how we show up at work.

We are committed to having a safe and inclusive workplace and we value the diversity everyone brings. Our organisation welcomes and embraces inclusion, regardless of gender identity, age, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability, or religion.

We've achieved the Rainbow Tick\(external link\) and the Domestic Violence Free\(external link\) tick. The Rainbow Tick is about accepting and valuing people in the workplace, and embracing the diversity of sexual and gender identities. We are monitored annually to ensure our policies, staff training, staff engagement and support, external engagement, and monitoring comply with the the certification requirements.

The DVFree Tick shows we support respectful behaviours and we have a best practice workplace response to those impacted by domestic violence.

We embrace our diverse workforce and culture, and we support flexible working arrangements.
